OCBC Alternative Investments Specialists

provide investors with a wide menu of alternative solutions to diversify one's portfolio. Our team of experts has a proven process in selecting structured products, providing rationales to our customers to help them make informed decisions and identifying the right solutions to meet their investment needs. Our Alternative Investments Specialists work with global investment banks such as Deutsche Bank, Morgan Stanley, BNP Paribas and Merrill Lynch. And we constantly keep you updated on market developments as part of our commitment to monitor your investments from start to finish.

Our Alternative Investment Solutions:

Retail notes

Investors with a starting capital as low as S$10,000 may consider retail notes. The product serves as a lower entry fixed income alternative to products such as bonds while allowing investors to gain exposure to commodities, credits or equities. With retail notes, investors with a lower starting capital can still earn enhanced yields while diversifying their investment portfolios at the same time.

ELNs/ELIs

Equity-linked notes/Equity-linked instruments are innovative structured products that offer a fixed return based on the performance of the underlying share within a fixed tenor. The product allows investors to customise their returns according to their risk appetite over a short investment tenor.

SGX-listed products:

Products such as warrants and Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs) are traded on The Singapore Exchange. To help our customers make better investment choices, we hold regular seminars on these individual products in order to equip them with the right knowledge and tools.

Warrants

Warrants are another alternative investment available that allow investors to gain exposure to the underlying security without actually owning it. Investors who have a view on the movement of the underlying security can buy a warrant, which cost a fraction of the price of the underlying share. Hence, warrants offer leverage by limiting the cost to price of warrant paid while offering unlimited directional exposure to the underlying share. What's more, warrants can also be used as a hedging tool, or to extract cash from equity exposure.

ETFs

Exchange-traded funds (ETFs) are passively-managed index funds that offer investors instant access to a diversified portfolio of securities representing the index but at a low cost or entry minimum. The types of indices ETFs can track and trade on The Singapore Exchange include a particular stock market, asset class, commodity or sector. With ETFs, investors enjoy greater transparency and the ability to enjoy exposure and diversification at relatively low transaction costs and without the need to buy into single stocks.

Fixed Income Securities

Fixed income securities are debt instruments that you can buy or sell over-the-counter. At OCBC Securities, we provide a comprehensive range of fixed income securities such as corporate bonds and convertible bonds to help you diversify your portfolio. Fixed Income Securities typically allows you to receive a regular source of interest income that is higher than fixed deposit rates. Depending on the interest rate environment, you may also potentially make capital gains or losses if you choose to liquidate your bond investments before the maturity date.

Take advantage of our dedicated team's expertise and let our Alternative Investments Specialists help you diversify, enhance and grow your portfolio today.
